ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

Violence affects all racial, ethnic and socioeconomic groups, but its burden falls disproportionately upon urban, poor and minority populations. There is increasing evidence of the impact of trauma exposure on children's neurophysiological and psychological development. This conference brings together three world leaders — Drs. Esther Deblinger, Betty Pfefferbaum and Marleen Wong, who have vast experience working with victimized children, adolescents and their families. They will discuss ways to identify, assess and conduct intervention programs in various settings such as schools, clinics and communities.

A major focus of the conference will be the presentation of ways to implement evidence-based trauma-focused cognitive-behavioral therapies (TF-CBT). TF-CBT is the recommended standard of care for children and adolescents who have experienced abuse and trauma. (See www.musc.edu/tfcbt and www.nctsn.org for descriptions of these treatment approaches.) The presenters will discuss how educators, physicians, mental health professionals, clergy, police officers and other members of the community can work to reduce the negative impact of trauma experiences and foster ways to nurture resilience.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Educators, guidance counselors, psychologists, social workers, mental health workers, marriage and family therapists, social agency personnel, judges, law enforcement personnel, clergy, pediatricians, primary care physicians and psychiatrists.

CONFERENCE OBJECTIVES

As a result of attending this conference, participants should be better able to:

■ Identify and assess the effects of victimization;
■ Conduct trauma-focused cognitive-behavioral treatment (TF-CBT);
■ Address the needs of family members of traumatized children and adolescents;
■ Implement trauma-based interventions in a variety of settings, including schools, clinics and communities.

MEETING THE CHALLENGE: CONSIDERING SOME FACTS

(See www.melissainstitute.org for a discussion of ways to nurture resilience in high-risk children and families)

■ There are approximately 2 million cases of child maltreatment (physical abuse and neglect) each year in the U.S.
■ 3.3 million children in the U.S. witness assaults against their mothers annually.
■ 40 percent of men who abuse their female partners also abuse their children.
■ 30 percent of children living in high-crime neighborhoods have witnessed a shooting, 35 percent have seen a stabbing and 24 percent have seen someone murdered.
■ 20 million children live in households with an addictive caregiver, and of that population approximately 675,000 children are suspected of being abused.
■ Exposure to violence is associated with childhood depression, behavioral problems, poor school performance, decreased IQ, impaired mental ability, lower grades and increased incidence of school absence.

CONFERENCE DIRECTOR

Suzanne L. Keeley, Ph.D., is President of The Melissa Institute and a psychologist in private practice. She is also affiliated with Baptist Health South Florida. Dr. Keeley has had extensive clinical experience treating victims and perpetrators of violence.

PRESENTERS

Donald Meichenbaum, Ph.D., is Distinguished Professor Emeritus at the University of Waterloo, Ontario, and Research Director of The Melissa Institute. He is one of the founders of cognitive behavior therapy, and in a survey of North American clinicians Dr. Meichenbaum was voted "one of the 10 most influential psychotherapists of the century." He is a Distinguished Visiting Professor at the University of Miami.

Esther Deblinger, Ph.D., is a professor at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey. She is co-founder and co-director of the Child Abuse Research Education and Service Institute (CARES). She has published four books, including Treating Sexually Abused Children and Their Non-offending Parent, and co-authored Treating Trauma and Traumatic Grief in Children and Adolescents, and a children's book. Dr. Deblinger has presented internationally on her pioneering work.

Betty Pfefferbaum, M.D., J.D., is a child psychiatrist and chairman of the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at the University of Oklahoma College of Medicine, where she holds the Jonas Chair. She is Director of the Terrorism and Disaster Center of the National Child Traumatic Stress Network. Dr. Pfefferbaum organized clinical services after the 1995 Oklahoma City bombing, and consulted on many other disaster/terrorist events, including the aftermath of September 11, 2001.

Marleen Wong, LCSW, Ph.D., is Director of the Crisis Counseling and Intervention Service for the Los Angeles School District. She collaborated in the development and evaluation of CBITS (Cognitive Behavior Intervention for Trauma in Schools). She has consulted on trauma-focused interventions in the U.S., Canada and Asia. She is a member of the U.S. commission to prepare for the consequences of terrorism.
